Graduation data for all programs:

Quantic School of Business and Technology admits new classes of students to each degree program at regular intervals throughout the year, with 9 classes of students per program enrolled in 2020. Programs are designed for working professionals, with enough flexibility to accommodate the obligations of daily life. In the event that a student is unable to dedicate the proper amount of time to a program, the student may defer to a future cohort. Deferrals may be done up to two times before the student must re-apply to a new program. For the purpose of graduation data, students are allowed to defer and continue study up to 3 years after the start of their initial enrollment in a program. Consistent with these standards, the following tables present the enrollment and graduation data by year of enrollment for each of Quantic School of Business and Technology's degree programs.
